No words can describe the scenes that followed the attacks of September 11, 2001. The images are powerful, the emotions they evoke are undeniable. We have been witness to both evil and to greatness. Before our very eyes and defying the objectives of the madmen hell-bent on our destruction, our country united like it never has: thousands of volunteers rushed forward, our Fireman, Policeman, and EMS are comic book superheroes come alive. New York saw it's Mayor achieve greatness and Bush fill his presidential shoes. Let the pictures talk...

Please pray for my dad FDNY Chief Dennis Cross. He is trapped under the rubble of the towers. He has not yet been found. We are all hopeful that he will come home. Please pray with us and send my dad positive messages to stay strong.

Thank you and God Bless,
~ Denise J. Cross.

I hold in my hand life,
nothing of importance,
for it can be taken with a knife,
and a knife in hand does nothing.

I hold in my arms love,
nothing of importance,
for it never returns like a dove,
and a dove in arm is beautiful.

I hold in my mind bravery,
nothing of importance,
for bravery comes often with fury,
and fury is fueled by hate.
I hold in my eye death,

everything of importance,
for it is the final breath,
and death is the end of all.
~ By Robert G. Lee, age 15

For too long, many thought we were devoid of heroes. We have been proven wrong. The faces of these people will forever haunt our dreams and live in our souls. The sadness, hopelessness, horror and tears we see each time we turn on the TV. But they go on amidst it all. Now, America has joined as a family. . . a family of love and unity. Sorrow has drenched our lives and tears of sorrow and at some moments, happiness, have been shed. For those who have left us, let us never forget and for those whose eyes have suffered so much horror, may we embrace their heroism forever.

I believe at this time the line to heaven has grown long and so very slow. I believe this is so because God is taking an extra moment to embrace each one as they find their way into his arms. May they all find peace in his light.
~ Mitzi Kleidon

This is dedicated to the brave and courageous police officers who on Tuesday, September 11, 2001 fought a new criminal and gave their all...

"A Part of America Died"

Somebody killed a policeman today,
and part of America died.
A piece of our country he swore to protect, will be buried with him at his side.
The suspect that shot him will stand up in court, with counsel demanding his rights.

While a young widowed mother must work for her kids, and spend many long, lonely nights.

The beat that he walked was a battlefield too, just as if he'd gone off to war.

Though the flag of our nation won't fly at half-mast, to his name they will add a gold star.

Yes, somebody killed a policeman
today, in your town or mine.

While we slept in comfort behind our locked doors, a cop put his life on the line.

Now his ghost walks a beat on a dark

city street, and he stands at each new rookie's side.
He answered the call, of himself gave his all,
And a part of America died.
~ By: Deputy Shirley R. Anderson-Cooper #398 (retired) Marion County Sheriff Dept. Indianapolis, IN

Your dedication and bravery is beyond words. Each day you put yourself in danger. You don't hesitate going into harm's way. I have great respect for you. Thank you for being our Guardian Angels!!! I know your dedication and your need to save lives. I am a Naval Corpsman Reservist who is standing by, waiting to be called back to active duty. This will be my third call to war. I do not hesitate to serve our great country. My prayers are for you.

REMEMBER ME

To the living, I am gone.
To the sorrowful, I will never return.
To the angry, I was cheated.

But to the happy, I am at peace.
And to the faithful, I have never left.
I cannot be seen, but I can be heard.
I cannot speak, but I can listen.

So as you stand upon a shore gazing at a beautiful sea – As you look upon a flower and admire its simplicity – remember me.

Remember me in your heart, your thoughts, and your memories. Of the times we loved, the times we cried, the times we fought, the times we laughed. For if you always think of me I will never have gone.

My Friend Snowman 2714
New York City Firefighter
I remember when I first talked to him online, I asked him what his name meant. He said his co-workers gave him that name because when it came to fighting fires he had ice running through his veins. His name is Brett Berrios and the extension on his screen name is his shield #. He has an 8-year-old little girl whom he was raising by himself.

His mom informed me Wednesday night that he was among the missing firefighters. Although with every passing day my fears grow, I continue to pray that he will be found safe. I keep waiting for the phone to ring and to hear his voice on the other end singing to me. I miss him so very much. I hope that I get to pick up the phone soon and hear that sweet voice again. Right now my heart is crying, and I pray my heart will smile again.

God Bless You All

own life, determined to save any and all he could... only to have the building collapse over him and the others from NEW YORK'S BRAVEST. Greg Sikorsky, a really good man, has a wife, child, a great family; was extremely disciplined and dedicated, he really loved being a fire fighter. My heart really hurts for these brave men and their families; we all owe them so much.

Please say a prayer for Greg and his fallen comrades, as well as all the others who lost their lives in this unspeakable tragedy. Support the Flag; support the President; and support this country in its determination to drop the hammer on these bastards who dare do this to our great people.

We have lost Harvey Harrell, father of two and friend of countless people. My cousin (his wife) had already lost her first fiancé (Marty Celic, NYC fire-fighter) 25 years ago to an arson fire. Now Harvey is gone and his brother, too. On top of all this loss, the first fiancé's brother Tommy Celic is missing in WTC. Too much for one family to bear. Please pray that one member is found. Thank you.

COUNTING THEIR LOSSES

Top Brokerage Firm Hit Hardest By WTC Attack

In the light of so much tragedy and devastation, yet another tremendous loss occurred. During the events of September 11, 2001, many of the employees of Cantor Fitzgerald did not escape the World Trade Center's destruction.

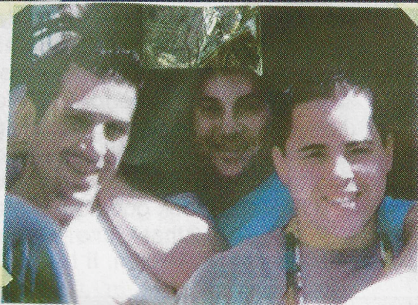

One of the top bond brokerages on Wall Street, the firm had around 1,000 employees with operations on the 101st and 103rd to 105th floors of One World Trade Center, the first tower to be hit by the attacks. CEO Howard Lutnick tried in vain to reach employees in their offices once he saw the burning tower. He got into his office late on the day of the attacks because he stayed home to see his 5-year-old son off on his first day of kindergarten.

As people left the building, he asked each one which floor they had been working on. No one leaving the building had been higher up than the 91st floor. His firm's offices were 10 floors higher.

"Then I heard the sound. It sounded like another plane hit the building," said Lutnick. "It was the plane that had hit tower two (Two World Trade Center). It was so unbelievably loud. Someone screamed out another one was coming. I started running; I tried to get ahead of the smoke."

Lutnick managed to get out of the building, but tragically, his brother, who also works for the firm, didn't. "My brother was on the 103rd floor, he worked for me at Cantor," he said. "He called my sister, just after the first plane hit. He said the smoke was pouring in, he was in a corner office and he's not going to make it out. He just wanted to tell her that he loved her," Lutnick said.

So far, Cantor Fitzgerald has accounted for 300 employees. The company has not yet received any information about the remaining employees who were working on the 101st floor or above. "I have to do something for the 700 families," Lutnick said. "Seven hundred families. Seven hundred families. I can't say it without crying."

LAST WORDS

They Are Gone, But Not Forgotten

Most victims of sudden tragedy never get a chance to say goodbye to the ones they love. But in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington D.C., it seems that many of the airline passengers on those fateful flights, as well as many office workers in the World Trade Center, got to do just that. Delivered via e-mail, cell phone, and even voicemail, hundreds of husbands, fathers, sons, brothers, wives, mothers, daughters, sisters, and friends sent out one last message to their families. These communications — fervent, desperate, tearful and some, even calm, allowed victims to spend their final moments with those they would soon leave behind. In the days after the hijackings, these haunting dispatches slowly surfaced. Some chose to keep these conversations private. Others, however, wanted the world to know how terrified, but how grateful they were to have the chance to say goodbye.

Stuart T. Meltzer, 32, who grew up in Newton and began his job at the World Trade Center just last month, called his wife from the 105th floor of the first building shortly after it was hit. He said to her:

"Honey something terrible is happening. I don't think I am going to make it. I love you. Take care of the children."

— The Boston Herald, Sept. 13

Larry King: Lorie Van Auken is in New York. Her husband Kenneth is missing. He was working on the 102nd floor. What does he do, Lorie?

Lorie Van Auken, wife of missing World Trade Center worker: He works for Cantor Fitzgerald. And he's a bond broker. And he was on the 102nd floor. And we just haven't heard anything at all.

King: Did you talk to him at all? Did he call home?

Van Auken: He called home. He left a message. And that's the last I heard from him...

King: Let's listen to the voice of Kenneth Van Auken calling home.

Kenneth Van Auken: I love you. I'm in the World Trade Center. And the building was hit by something. I don't know if I'm going to get out. But I love you very much. I hope I'll see you later. Bye.

— Larry King Live, Sept. 12

Staff in the Los Angeles office of Cantor Fitzgerald L.P. listened via telephone on Tuesday as chaos unfolded in its New York office minutes after the first plane crashed into the North Tower of the World Trade Center, according to a person who spoke with the Los Angeles office early Tuesday.

After struggling to get a telephone connection in an effort to ascertain what had happened to its New York office, the Los Angeles staff managed to get through and put the call on speaker phone.

The Los Angeles staff, who then put the call on its in-house public-address system, heard a colleague in the New York office say, "I think a plane just hit us." While the phone call continued to be broadcast over the entire Los Angeles office, the New York office began filling with smoke and people began screaming.

"Somebody's got to help us... We can't get out... The place is filling with smoke," a person in the New York office was heard to say. Shortly afterward, the connection was cut off.

Alice Hoglan's son, Mark, called her from United Airlines Flight 93, which was hijacked as it traveled from Newark to San Francisco. Alice knew her son was upset as soon as she heard him. He said, "Hi Mom, this is Mark Bingham." She said her son told her: "We've been taken over. There are three men that say they have a bomb." Mark, who spoke first with his aunt, also told his mother, "I love you, I love you, I love you."

Brian Sweeney, 38, of Barnstable, a passenger on Flight 175 that crashed into the World Trade Center's South Tower, left a message for his wife, Julie, on their answering machine shortly before 9 a.m. "Hey Jules, it's Brian, I'm on a plane and it's hijacked and it doesn't look good. I just wanted to let you know that I love you and I hope to see you again. If I don't, please
